A QUEER CASE

One of the most peculiar divorce case ever filed in the district court of Sedgwick county was that filed yesterday. It is the case of Mrs. Susan Rodkey vs. Jacob C. Rodkey. The plaintiff is 75 years of age and the defendant 87. They have lived five years in Sedgwick county and have been married since 1879, the event occur ing at Kokomo, Ind. She alleges that for the year last past the defendant has been miser; that he is able to provide wholesome food to sustain her, but won't do it. She also alleges that he endeavors to compel her to subsist on cornmeal mush, but she gives him credit for an occasional bubbling up of his gen-erous nature when he allows her to vary her food with some potatoe soup. When she is not satisfied with this and asks for anything else he raises a row. Mr. Rodkey has also warned trades people against selling his wife any food or clothing. In addition to this she charges him with cruelty. Whenever she asks him for anything, she alleges that he calls her obscene and abusive names, which she does not care to relate. Mr. Rodkey is also charged with that boyish habit of carrying a revolver; that he brandishes this weapon occasionally to her great alarm. She also alleges that he writes abusive notes to her about the management of household affairs. She complains that she cannot cook her simple meal without his presence, supervision and criticisms; that when she is fortunate enough to have coffee for a meal and attempts to make it be will measure the same out in small quantities to save a few grains, and that he does the same with ingredients for the meal such as salt, &c.

Another serious charge she make against her old man is that he puts the lamp and fire out early at nights so as to make her go to bed and save the difference in cost between blood heat and artificial heat. She does not even have peace then, according to her statement, for he prowls about the house raising disturbances that would lead people who did not know better to the belief that their home was an insane asylum. She also alleges that there is no companionship whatever with him: that he has a comfortable home in Mathewson addition; land in Summer county valued at $8,000, and a bouse and lot in the cur of Wellington. She asks for alimony the Wichita home and $2,000 in cash. If she can prove the allegations in her petition there is no question but what Mr. Rodkey will have to pay her more than would keep her in far better fare than mush and potato soup for the balance of

A FUNNY CAMPAIGN. The Demo-Pops Jaw Each Other and The

Laugh in Their Sleeves. This is a peculiar political campaign Never before has there been such a burlesque in this county as the one now being played by the Fusion Democrats and the Fusion Populists under the guise of a political campaign. It is a cold-hearted, cruel deceit played on the honest people of both the Democratic and Populistic parties. In the Omaha declaration of principles the Populists accused the Democrats and Republicans of being fighting a sham battle over the tariff; if ever a sham battle was fought between two parties it is the battle now going on nightly between the two parties to the fusion, on the stump.

A few nights ago Mr. Sankey for the Populists and Mr. Fitch for the Demo crats spoke from the same platform to the same audience on the West Side. Mr. Sankey skinned Cleveland alive and literally hung the hide on the fence before the the very eyes of Mr. Fitch. He hit the Democratic party on every weak spot, and Mr Fitch had to sit by and listen to it. When it came to Mr. Fitch's turn to speak he defended the Democratic party with vigor, and the little comedy-farce Notwithstanding this mutual roasting of parties the Pop speaker advised his hearers to vote for the Democrats on the ticket, and the Democratic speaker advised them to vote for the Pops on the ticket. Of course both Fitch and Sankey laughed when the little sham battle was over, and thought how cleverly they had fooled the common berd. This is their plan of campaign and they are trying to make the play as natural as possible. The case was repeated a few nights afterwards when Judge McCandless spoke for Democracy and Judge Babb spoke against it On that very day the news came of the failure of the Lombard Mortgage Company, and before the audience he thanked God for it and expressed the hope that the day would not be far distant when every mortgage company and every bank in the United States would be busted. It is said that he roasted President Cleveland in the most terrible manner and yet Democrats were urged to listen to him and to vote for the candidates which he advocated with his bank busting theories.

-Cream Sauce -This is one of the things one rarely finds perfectly made. Those who have tried to make it good and failed, I beg to try the following method of making it: Take an ounce and a half of butter and a scant tablespoonful of flour, mix together to a paste; when smooth, add half a pint of . warm milk, a small teaspoonful of sait and a little white pepper, or a dash of eavenne. Bet it on the fire, and let it boil till it is thick enough to mask the back of a spoon transparently; then add a squeeze of lemon juice and an other ounce and a half of fresh butter. stir until quite blended. This sauce is the foundation for many others and for some purposes the beaten yolk of an egg is added, when first on the boil. Capers, chopped mushreoms, chopped celery or oysters may be added, accord ing to the use for which it is intended. The object of adding the second butter is because boiling takes away the flavor
